As in previous editions, the four main goals of this textbook are to define learning and to show how the learning process is studied (Chapters 1 and 2); to place learning theory in historical perspective (Chapter 3); and to present essential features of the major theories of learning with implications for educational practices (Chapters 4 through 15). We have attempted to retain the best features of earlier editions while making revisions that reflect current research and scholarship. The most significant revisions include the following:

- An introduction to theory and applications in Behavioral Economics (Chapter 5)
- New research in the Pavlovian tradition including learned irrelevance and superconditioning phenomena (Chapter 7)
- Exciting developments in the neurosciences with implications for the "active brain" approach in Gestalt psychology (Chapter 10)
- Albert Bandura's "Agentic Perspective" (Chapter 13)
- Contemporary re-thinking about reinforcement centers in the brain and their possible roles in addiction (Chapter 14)
- Exciting developments in neural plasticity (ability to form new connections and even generate new cells in adult brain) (Chapter 14)
- Introduction to William Timberlake's "Biological Behaviorism" (Chapter 15)
- New developments concerning prepared learning of phobias in humans (Chapter 15)
- Updated research and references throughout
- Chapter 16 (Implications for Education) was deleted and important educational implications were integrated within each theorist's chapter
